Lee-Bourland Camp 1848

Newsletter

COMMANDER'S NOTE:

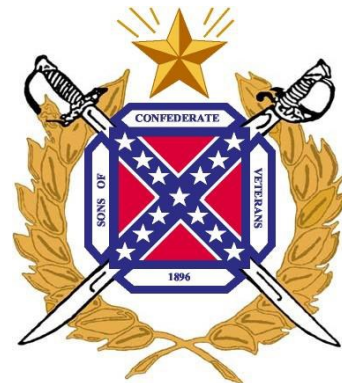

January was a good start on the SCV things to do list. The pictures of the Fort Worth Stock Show Parade that David Moore took, it looks like the SCV had a successful presence with the folks of Fort Worth, Texas. Those pictures can be seen at "southernlegacy.org".

And then most of the SCV camps & UDC chapters through out the 3rd & 4th Brigade area had some kind of celebration for Confederate Heroes Day. I know Monday was the 19th, the actual birthday date of Gen. Robert Edward Lee. And the 19th moves to Tuesday in 2016. There is no need to cause friction on MLK Day if it can be avoided. I believe we got our point across on the Sunday gatherings at the perspective cemeteries & CV monuments in the manner of Ladies and Gentlemen that our Southern heritage dictates us to be.

A the camp meeting while I was giving out the "when & where's" of these Confederate Heroes Day celebrations , our new Color Bearer & Aid to Camp ; George Williams asked, "Why don't we do our own?" What an epiphany?

So, within a few minutes SCV Lee-Bourland Camp # 1848 in Gainesville, Texas had their first annual Confederate Heroes Day Celebration "when'd & where'd." Pictures later in the newsletter.

I'd like to thank the 3 Ladies & 6 Gentleman who showed up in period attire on such short notice. And I would like to thank the support folks of these 9 for being there also.

Jack Hinson, Who was he? Well, for those of you in the reading audience which can't wait for the next sniper story, your waiting is over. The story itself can be found on "Wikipedia.org." The Free Encyclopedia. The subject matter and Jack Hinson story were brought to Ozzie the editor's attention by an Oklahoma SCV Brg.Gen. Stand Watie Camp # 149 member: James Catron.

John W. "Jack" Hinson, "Old Jack" (1807–1874) was a farmer in Stewart County, Tennessee who operated as a Confederate partisan sniper against Union forces in the Between-the-Rivers region of Tennessee and Kentucky during the American Civil War.

Hinson, a prosperous plantation owner of Scotch-Irish descent, was neutral at the outbreak of the war but took up arms after two of his sons were executed as suspected bushwhackers by Federal troops; their heads were cut off and stuck on the gate-posts to Hinson's home.^[1] Hinson used a custom made 50 caliber 41-inch barrel Kentucky Long Rifle to target Union soldiers more than a half-mile away on land, transports, and gunboats along the Tennessee River and the Cumberland River, killing as many as a hundred. Hinson also served as a guide for Nathan Bedford Forrest in his assault on the Union supply center at Johnsonville, Tennessee in November 1864. He was the father of Robert Hinson, who served as the leader of a highly effective partisan band in the Between-the-Rivers region until his death in combat on September 18, 1863. Jack Hinson was never apprehended despite the commitment of elements of four Union regiments to pursue him, and survived the war, dying on 28 April 1874 (according to the 16 May 1874 Clarkville Weekly Chronicle, via the Dover Record) in the White Oak/Magnolia area of Houston county, Tennessee. He is buried in the family plot in the Cane Creek Cemetery (with a different birth year of 1793 and death year of 1873), just off White Oak road (near McKinnon, Tennessee). A marker was placed in the Boyd Cemetery far away to the North, in the Land-Between-the Lakes (LBL) area.

He is commemorated in a roadside marker in Kentucky,^[2] and his story has been told in two books by Tom McKenney:

Battlefield Sniper: Over 100 Civil War Kills, Tom C. Lt. Col. McKenney^[3]
Jack Hinson's One Man War.^[4]
